THE THINGS WE MISS.

When a friend we've loved has gone, haid farewell and traveled on.

What is it we sigh to knew.

We who struggle still below?

What is it he look away.

That we searn for, day by day?

What is it we long to claim.

Not the inster of his fame!

Is our sign of grief displayed.

For the money that he made?

In we mourn a friend because lie had earned the world's applause! When his soul has left the clay lie we miss him, day by day. And is all our serrow for. The few medals that he wore! Was his life so small and cheap. Now that he has gone to steep. That we miss, with him away. But the gitter of display!

Oh, the things we miss, when one That we loved has traveled on, Are not gold and earthly fame. Nor the glory of a same, But the handelsep that was true, And the cheerful smile we knew; The glad voice that used to speak Words of courage to the weak, And the strength that used to share All the griefs we had to bear.

It is not for what he had. That his absence makes in rad. It was not the louch of skill in the hands forever still. That we miss, who stayed behind, that the gentle deeds and kind. That they did to smooth our way, it is the voice that used to say Words of comfort and of hiss. And the vanished smile, we miss. Copyright, 1919, by Edgar A. Guest.

Six Organizations Arrive at Conclusion After Careful Study.

At a special executive session convened Tuesday afternoon in the office of Mayor C. H. Hubbard, the Allied Civic committee reached the conclusion that Spavinaw creek is the only practical available source from which Tulsa may obtain list water for the present and future, and recommended in a report to the mayor and beard of city commis-sioners that steps toward attaining a supply from this source be ex-pedited with the utmost diligence. In taking this action the civic committee fully indersed the report of Hapry A. Presey, consulting engineer for the city, who recently rendered his opinion to the city officials on the respective merits of available water sources for Tulsa.

In it's report the committee further states that "the only source of supply which answers the recognition of the first draft. Later General Johnson was promoted, to
